Friday June 6, 1873. The Water Question. lication just now that in the course of another three or four weeks the of Victoria will be called to endure orrors of a water famine. The Spring Ridge Water Company have notified the City Council that on and after the first of July next they intend to cut off the supply of water for the use of the Fire Department, unless the Council will agree to pay therefor the sum of $150 per month. It is also understood to be the intention of the Water Company to double the present rates charged to ivate customers from and after the first of of aforesaid, or in the event of their nonliance with those terms to cut off the On Saturday, June 21, 1873. sapply of water entirely. That the Water Company have a perfect right to wind up their business and cease to supply the citisens with water whenever they deem it to be their interest to do so, there can be no doubt. That is a matter no one else has any right to the first with or call in question. If the enterprise is a non-paying one, it would be very articles including a Surprise Pressium. Tickets for the Tombola 14% cents each.

The Grounds will be open at 11 a. M., Dancing to command to supply the citizens with water at a mane at 10 clock. ne to supply the citizens with water at a to themselves. Whether it be a paying prese an opinion; nor is it a matter with high the public have any concern. We bewhich the public have any cencern. We be-lieve, however, that so long as the company continue to supply the citizens with water apon any conditions whatever, they are bound by the terms agreed upon with the City Council, when they obtained the right to lay their pipes through the streets of the city, to furnish the Fire Department with what water they require free of charge. The moment they refuse to do so, their right to deliver water in the city by means of pipes will cease. But should the Council then see at to prohibit the Water Company supplying the citizens with water for domestic use, how he citizens with water for domestic use, how are they going to provide the citizens with a substitute for Spring Ridge water, bad as everyone admits it to be? At the rate of speed ith which the Council, or the Water Commissioner, is progressing with the work of supplying the citizens with water under the provisions of the "Water Works Act, 1873," re fear it will be some considerable time ore we shall derive very much benefit from that undertaking. Four months will soon have elapsed since the Governor gave his have elapsed since the Governor gave his assent to the Corporation Water Works Bill, and as yet comparatively little or nothing his been done, if we except the appointment of the Water Commissioner at a salary of $150 per month. We understand a surveyor is employed in running a line around Elk Late, but as yet we have seen no explanation to what the precise object is in doing so. The owners of the land which borders the hata in question, we are informed have chreatened the Water Commissioner with an fajoration to restrain him from proceeding th the work of erecting the dam necessar or accumulating the water required for water rocks purposes, ustil the land the Corpora-ion needs has been staked off, and the terms of payment for the same has been agreed upon. Whether the owners of the land in question can legally pursue that course, and the throw obstacles in the way of the Council in their efforts to supply the city with the council in the water, is doubtful. The Act clearly defines the course of procedure to be taken in such cases, and whatever quantity of land may be required for the purpose of carrying out the caterprise the Council have in hand, must be part for as mutually agreed upon between the parties interested, or tailing to agree the matter must be referred to arbitration, and the decision of a majority of the arbitrators shall be fined. If every land-owner whose property is in any way affected by the proposed water works, or who may feel disposed to annoy and obstruct the Council In the prosecution of the work, can effect his purpose by means of injunctions issued from the Supreme Court, there is no telling when the Council will succeed in bringing water into the city, or how much of the many succeeds the provisions of "The Municipal Council will succeed in bringing water into the city, or how much of the council will succeed in bringing water into the city, or how much of the city. water into the city, or how much of the one bandred thousand dellars to be raised by the reunder, that the Municipal By-Law the delayer's fees and other legal expenses before the place are laid between Elk Lake and Victoria. We begin to fear that in order to about the place of the provisions of "The Municipal By-Law thereunder that the Municipal Assessment Boll for the year 1873, has this day been wreturned to make the Municipal Assessment Boll for the year 1873, has this day been wreturned to make the Municipal Assessment Boll for the year 1873, has this day been wreturned to make the third that the Municipal By-Law there are the Municipal By-Law the Municipal By-Law the Municipal By-Law there are the Municipal By-Law aria. City Clerk's Office, June 5th, 1873 je6 lm required than the Council at first suprequired than the Council at first sup-sed, and unless the greatest degree of boomy be observed in the management of b affair, we shall not be surprised to see Council tapping at the door of the Legis-ive Assembly by-and-bye for the passage another Aut to enable them to borrow an ditional fifty thousand dollars on the credit the city before they will have funds enough earry the Water Works to completion here can be no two opinions as to the absorbers can be up two opinions as to the absorbers can be up two opinions. carry the Water Works to completion here can be no two opinions as to the absolite accessity that exists for an adequate apply of good and wholesome water for the set of the citizens of Victoria, and that had must be met at whatever cost. A great leaf depends, however, upon the Council, and commissioner who is acting under their intractions, whether this undertaking is to prove a great blessing to the citizens as well as a source of revenue to the city, or whether it is to prove a perpetual burden to the rate-papers. One hundred thousand dollars judiciously expended should be sufficient to cover the cest of this very desirable undertaking, but unless care be taken and economy be observed, it is quite possible that the people's money may be frittered away unaccessarily and very little be left by-and-bye to show for it.

Last session. when we had lost a distinguished Canadianmember of this House - who held a high position in Parliament, we came to the conclusion that in future no such adjournments should take place, but that we should adopt the English practice, and that no matter what might be the position of a deceased member of this House, the business of the country must still go on. I am aware that Sir George Cartier participated in that feeling. Although he was a personal friend, a strong personal friend of the illustrious gen-tleman-I speak of Mr. Sandfield Macdonald -who then left us, he felt it to be his duty to agree with me and with a m jority of Parliament, that the interests of the country would be best subserved by laying down the strict rule as it is carried out in England. At the same time, this is a very exceptional case. Sir George Cartier held a position which almost no man in Canada has held for very many years, and I am quite sure that this House will do what they think is best under the circumstances. On the whole, sir, my own opinion is in favor of our, as it were meeting what would be his wishes, by letting no private consideration prevent the business of the country from going on, and by at once proceeding to business. This is a suggestion that comes from me, as it will be felt by everyone who hears me, in the public interest, and is made with great violence to my own feelings, but I think that on the whole it is better that we should proceed with the business.

Hon. Mr. Mackenzie-It is always a solemi thing, sir, to be brought face to face with death, and especially when it affects those with whom we have been long associated either in public or in private life, and I feel to-day, with probably every member of this House, that in the loss of Sir George Cartier, the country has sustained a public loss of no ordinary magnitude. It has been my fortune to sit with that hon, gentleman for the last four or five Parliaments. It never was my fortune to agree with him in his political views or to follow him as one o' his politic l allies. At the same time it never was my misfortune to have anything but the best personal relations with him, and I was struck with sadness at the suddenness of his death, his somewhat premature death, for although we knew his health was in a failing condidanger of his life.

tion, no one thought there was any immediate Rt. Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald-Hear, Mr. Mackenzie-We have all looked forward of 1,500 Republican troops. The result is for the past few weeks, before the House rose, BAYONNE, June 4.—The Carlists appeared old Parliament back to his old place. That before Irrum to-day and began an attack on is, of course, now impossible, and I am sure the place. At last accounts they had taken this side of the House will be willing to agree to any course that his own friends think wise or judicious, in order to pay that official position in the House where he long reigned as the strongest man in it, deserves the hon. Premier, that we would perhapa best consult Sir George Cartier's own views when in life, by adhering to the course which he suggested on the occasion of Mr. Sandfield Macdonald's death. At that time we had before us a very recent example of what was done in England under similar circumstances When Lord Clarendon died the English Parliament was in session, and although he was a leading member of that Ministry, and one of the grandest specimens of the old English nobility, it was not thought due to the occasion that even the House of which he was a member should adjourn on that account. Business was carried on as before and the example seems to have been set in that respect by the English Parliament to which we look for a model for our procedure in most cases. We should also remember that the memory of the departed great does not depend upon the adjournment of the House, but more upon the affection with which the object of the adjournment may be eashrined in the people's hearts, and although we should adjourn, it may not be more a mark of respect in the estimation of anyone to the departed statesman than mentioning his name as we do from side to side of this House now. If he were here and any of his colleagues not only in the Ministry but in Parliament should have departed this life under similar circumstances, no one would be more ready than Sir George Cartier to say a kindly word in memory of those who had passed away, and at the same time he would be contented to give that expression of his feelings which is fitting on such occasions, without at a critical period of the session asking for an adjournment of the House, in order most fittingly to impress the respect due to his memory upon the minds of those who remain. can only say in regard to his memory that his name has much to do with Canadian history, and although many of us differed, and differed very seriously from the political views which he held; and although we sometimes had in this House severe contests, without having an opportunity in this new Parliament, of having been present even for tions, and the sympathy of the political party with which I am allied. I trust I may be able to convey it with the knowledge that it is sincere and unanimous amongst the gen-tlemen on this side of the House.

In llocos Norte an oscillatory shock of earthquake was felt at one o'clock on the cld-st members of Parliament, and as one of the cld-st members of Parliament, and as one of the cld-st members of Parliament, and as one of the cld-st colleagues of Sir George Cartier,

The Death of Sir George Cartier. he joined most heartily in the regrets of the gentlemen who had spoken before him. Under these circumstances he would only say that a greater citizen, a man of truer and greater heart, a warmer and more sincere friend, a man more devoted to his friends, had not lived.

Hon. Mr. Dorion could not at first be heard n the gallery. He was, however, understood to say that however much be might have differed from the deceased statesman be joined most heartily in the tribute that had been James Bay, Pandora St. paid to his memory, and if the House thought it proper to adjourn, he would not present any obstacle.

Hon. Mr. Tilley moved the House into committee to consider amendments to the inspection Bill. The amendments were mainly with regard to fees to be charged for inspe tions and to define the limits of operation of Inspectors who might be appointed, inspection not being obligatory outside their dis-

Hon. Mr. Tilley showed the fallacy of hon. member's argument and detended the proposition before the House. Hon. line the hon. gentleman had taken with re-Mr. Mackenzie contended that the measures brought in this session by the Government would make the taxation equal to or larger than that of Great Britain, driving immigration from this country. He proceeded with an attack on the Hon. Minister of Customs, following it up by reading a report from the last fall.

AFTER RECESS. Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald desir to give no lice of a proposition that he should submit to the House at its next meeting. He was able to do so now, though he was not able to do so a while ago. He considered that the life and history of Sir George Cartier were mixed up with the history and especially with the history of Confedera-tion, and believed that the country owed to him more than to any other man in Canada since it had been under British institutions. He was quite unprepared to make a speech on the question, but did think if ever there was an occasion in which the House should show its regard for a great man, now was the time, and if ever there was a man who deserved that expression of regard, it was Sir George Cartier. He should, therefore, pro-pose following English precedent, that the funeral of Sir George Cartier be a public funeral, and that the country should defray the expenses connected therewith. The House adjourned at 1:30 a. m. to 11
